Paul is the protagonist, or the main character, in Tangerine. His brother, Erik, is the antagonist, or the character who opposes the main character. In many cases, the protagonist is the character the reader is rooting for, and the antagonist is the character the reader is rooting against. Do you think that this is how Edward Bloor wants us to see Paul and Erik? What are some clues in the text that indicate that Bloor wants us to root for Paul? What are some clues that he wants us to root against Erik?
